

BUTLER'S FRIENDS IN PHILADELPHIA SUPPORTING HIM

Judge McDevitt Declares Officer Was Convicted First

"TRIAL AFTERWARDS"

Reveal Facts Concerning Dinner Which Started Criticism

By E. L. Rawley
La N. S. Staff Correspondent

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 5.—Philadelphia friends of Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler rallied to the veteran's support today upon receipt of news that the charges on which the general is to be tried here on Feb. 16 are "very severe."

Judge Harry S. McDevitt of the Philadelphia Common Pleas Court, an old friend, declared Butler had been "convicted first," and is "to be tried afterwards." He also bitterly denounced Secretary of the Navy Adams and other Government officials for humbling themselves before the rulers of Europe.

"I do not know Secretary Adams," Judge McDevitt told 2,000 members of the Philadelphia League of the Sacred Heart, "and I do not want to know him."

"But I do object to a Pennsylvanian such as Maj. Gen. Butler being convicted first and tried afterwards."

"Butler's court-martial is an insult to the intelligence of all Pennsylvanians," he said. "Who object to a man of Butler's type being strung up to the mast and then being tried. Butler is not infallible," continued the jurist amid storms of applause, "but neither is he yellow, and if we want milk-and-water soldiers and officers who bow to European rulers, then we don't want a Pennsylvanian."

Other friends of the Marine general broke their silence of years and revealed "the truth" of the famous "cocktail dinner" at San Diego, Calif., in April, 1926, which resulted in much criticism of General Butler.

The onus falling on Gen. Butler for the court-martialing and reprimanding of the late Col. Alexander S. Williams as a result of the dinner was transferred from the marine's shoulders to those of the late William Ashby Herman Robertson by Mr. and Mrs. C. S. A. Henry, of Ardmore, and Mr. and Mrs. Emmett R. Tamm, of Haverford, Pa.

STATE NEWS OF GENERAL INTEREST

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 5.—(INS)—The fair, the wearer would be required to don a sash about the waist.

The idea behind this garb, tailors pointed out, was to make the host easily distinguishable, if anyone cares enough to do so.

Mere males who saw samples of the "host suit," agreed there would be no difficulty in distinguishing a wearer.

LANCASTER, Feb. 5.—(INS)—Charging his hearing has been impaired as the result of being struck by a rock hurled by his tenant farmer, E. M. Book, Drumore township farmer, has filed suit for $5,000 damages against Ambrose Hamm.

The stoning, according to Book, followed an argument between he and Hamm. In a previous suit, Hamm pleaded guilty to charges of assault and battery in connection with the incident and was fined $10 and costs.

Two Held Under Bail On Robbery Charge

Frank Capella, Mill street, and Palmer Denny, Pond street, were placed on trial last night charged with larceny and forcible entry of a pool room on Pond street, near MR.

Chief Jones testified against the men and said that the pair had stolen a radio, some cigarettes and about $1.20 in change.

Jones on investigation of the robbery centered suspicion on Capella and Denny. He went to Capella who said that the radio had been taken out of town. A short time after that he returned it to the owner.

Denny, at the trial last night, took all the blame for the robbery, but Chief Jones requested that both be held because of the fact that Capella had endeavored to conceal the whereabouts of the radio.

Both men were placed under $500 bail for court.

BENSALEM STUDENTS PLAN MANY AFFAIRS

English Department to Conduct "Tryouts" for School Play

OTHER SCHOOL NOTES

BENSALEM TWP. HIGH SCHOOL, Cornwells Heights, Feb. 5.—At Yardley on Friday Bensalem split a double basketball bill. The girls romped all over the floor to defeat the Yardley maids by the overwhelming score of 46 to 11. The tables were turned in the boys' game however and although the Bensalem team played with everything it had, the final score showed that the local boys went under by the count of 26 to 24.

The Bensalem teams were very pleased to see so many of their loyal supporters at the game and hope that they will keep following them in future contests away.

Bensalem is glad to have Miss Davies back again after her short illness. Miss Kohler, of the English department, announced that tryouts are being made for the school play which will be called, "Polly of the Past." The date for the presentation of the play will be announced later.

The Dramatics Club is holding a contest for the entertainment of the members. The contest is to see who can guess the names of the most actors and actresses by merely observing them.

On January 30th, in the assembly hall the regular student body meeting was held. There was a Bible reading by Miss Jennings, followed by a song entitled, "God Ever Glorious," by the student body. The meeting was then called to order by the president, Axel Kleinsorg. At this meeting the new constitution of the Bensalem Township high school was read and approved by the student body. The students were favored with a piano duet played by Ethel Hartman and Betty Letrago.

All the squads are working nicely at the present time and many benefits will be had from them in the near future.

At the present time the Senior Science Club is planning to give a play in assembly.

There has been a girl appointed from each class in the "gym" club to take charge of her class in case of Miss Jennings' absence.

The members of the senior mathematics club is working out some very interesting mathematical puzzles at the meetings.

The regular meeting of the Senior Choral Club was held recently. At this meeting the election of officers took place. Those elected were as follows: president, Margaret Logan; vice-president, Wanda Budney; secretary, Betty Underwood; treasurer, Alma MacKenzie.

The Debate Club reported to be working real well and some very interesting debates can be looked forward to in the spring.

The Latin Club is preparing to give a play at the next Parent-Teacher meeting. The play will be given in Latin first then in English.

The Junior Library Club has been divided up into committees. These committees will take turns in furnishing books for the library.

"THE WISTAR INSTITUTE"

The Wistar Institute of Anatomy and Biology, Philadelphia, will move colonies of white rats to the institute's research farm at Emille, next June, at which point it is expected three or four thousand of these small mammals will be raised annually.

The 150-acre tract which was presented by E. W. Morris, president of the institute, for this work, is being improved, modern homes there being constructed for the research workers; buildings for the housing of rats, opossums, etc.; and the excellent springs which abound on the place being improved in surroundings.

The farm includes about one-third of the acreage of the original tract occupied by the institute's president for the past 42 years; and is most conducive to the work to be carried out, because of the several springs, one of which provides 2,000 gallons per hour.

The main building and museum of the institute will still be located in Philadelphia. It is announced by Dr. M. J. Greenman, director of the institute, which is a derivative of the University of Pennsylvania.

The old farm-house on the land now being developed, has been turned into a club-house where scientific workers interested in neurology, etc., find quarters. Miss F. L. Duhring, curator of the animal colonies, and who has charge of the white rat colony here and in Philadelphia, resides in one of the new homes; while still another is the residence of Dr. Greenman and wife. There is a small building where ambistoma will be cared for and studied, these being fresh water lizards or newts. Two new large structures will be used in the raising of white rats, and still another for housing of opossums and other small mammals.

The site of the new farm of the Wistar Institute, which was secured in 1928, was in possession of the Morris family since 1690. Within a few months, from this point, there will be shipped to all portions of the globe, colonies of white rats, the number of laboratories now receiving same from the Philadelphia rat building of the institute totalling 125.

Some difficulty is experienced in raising such large colonies of these rats in the city, owing to desire for

CAMPBELL ANXIOUS TO DO 260-MILE RATE

"I'm Keen to Do It Just to Prove It Can Be Done," He Says

MAY GO AFTER NOON

By James L. Kilgallen
(I. S. S. Sports Writer)

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., Feb. 5.—"I'm keen to do 260 miles an hour, officially, just to prove that it can be done."

Captain Malcolm Campbell of England, fastest automobile driver in the world, made this assertion to the writer here today as he made ready for a crack at shattering the world's record of 231.36 miles an hour. He may "go" this afternoon.

"I am not going to be unduly reckless but I intend to make one fast run down the ocean speedway and step it up to 260 or thereabouts," said the donator, matter-of-fact Englishman. "I know this Bluebird car of mine can do it."

Racing last Tuesday Campbell attained the astounding speed, according to his own computation, of 260 miles an hour. This, of course, was unofficial. Some folks hereabouts, who did not see the run, opine that it might be fast. Evidently some doubt exists that it is possible to drive a car that fast.

I will take the Captain's word for it that he was hitting 260 when his gears slipped. He certainly was whizzing along. Half a mile after the gear mishap the Captain's car contacted the wire at the start of the "measured mile." Even though he coasted this mile in neutral, he was officially timed at 198 miles an hour for the mile. It was obvious that he had suddenly slowed down considerably.

When he shoots for the record he will be officially timed twice over the measured mile — once running in a southerly direction, and again when he races north.

To eclipse the world's record of the late Sir Henry Segrave he must average over these two miles a speed in excess of 231.36 miles an hour.

"I will be pleased, of course, if I beat the record — no matter how small the margin," Campbell told International News Service in an interview, "but when I said I made 260 unofficially I wasn't jollying anyone. I am not much for swank or boasting, that is why I want to go at least 260 officially on one of the runs down the course."

"I don't want to give the impression that what I am aiming at is a two-way average of 260. After all, what I'm here for is to break the record of 231, and I am confident I can do it."

HIGH SCHOOL TEAMS SCORE TWO VICTORIES

Boys and Girls Defeat Hattboro in Local "Gym" Contest

BOYS SCORE 28 TO 12

By Leon Schiffer

Holding Hattboro scoreless practically the entire game, the local quintet succeeded in downing the visitors last night by the score of 28 to 12.

The local boys took the lead immediately after the opening tap-off through Herman's foul shot and followed this up with a duet of double-deckers by Galzerano. The first quarter saw the score standing 9-0, favor Bristol. Continually widening this margin, the Cardinal and Gray, by the end of the first half, had amassed eight extra points and had only endowed the visitors with one foul shot, contributed to Hattboro's total by Gelhaus, thus making the score at the end of the half, 17 to 1, favor Bristol.

The remainder of the game was practically a matter of signal practice for the local boys with wrestling and football mixed in here and there. When the last whistle which ended the game blew the crowd found an entire new Cardinal and Gray team, the Jay-Vees, on the floor.

Galzerano was high scorer for the local quintet, contributing eleven of the local school's twenty-eight points; while Gelhaus, of Hattboro, was high scorer for the visitors, annexing to his credit eight of the Orange and Black's twelve points.

Delinquent in Taxes; Rides To Jail in Own Auto

Four who were delinquent with their taxes were summoned to the Municipal Building last night, and two of the four were jailed. The other two made payment and one of the pair jailed was expected to make payment before being taken to Doylestown.

Those summoned were: Andrew A. Moore, 327 Monroe street; A. Asta, 8 Lincoln avenue; Albert Mowbray, 582 Linden street; Maurice Roe, 419 Buckley street.

Asta and Mowbray were the two jailed. Asta told Constable Crawford that he had no money and could not pay the tax. When Constable Crawford started to place him behind the bars he requested time to go outside and lock his automobile in which he had driven to the Municipal Building. He was permitted to lock his machine and was then placed behind the bars.

A number of summons for other delinquents have been issued and will be served today.

HULMEVILLE FOLKS IN CHARITY PROGRAM

Give Pleasing Program To Raise Funds for Welfare Work

CHILDREN PARTICIPATE

HULMEVILLE, Feb. 5.—Grown-ups and children participated in a pleasing and varied program for charity in the school house, here, last evening, when a Lindbergh Social was sponsored by the Parent-Teacher Association of the Hulmeville public school.

The purpose of the affair was for the raising of money for the Welfare Association of this section, which operates in several boroughs and townships in this vicinity.

The program was divided into two parts, the pupils under the direction of the teachers giving the first group of numbers; and residents of the town giving instrumental and vocal selections, etc., during the latter part.

The sum received through a silver offering totaled over $26. Refreshments of ice cream and home-made cake were sold, and the receipts from these were added to the fund.

Miss Anna Lukens, of Langhorne, who was introduced by the president of the P. T. A., Samuel J. Illick, briefly summarized the work of the welfare association in this section, and told of through what sources funds are received. Remarks were also made by Thomas B. Longhurst, president of Hulmeville-borough council.

The large number present thoroughly enjoyed the numbers of the evening. The latter part of the program included: Vocal duet, "One Fleeting Hour," Misses Grace H. Illick and Adeline E. Reetz, with piano and violin accompaniment by Miss Clara L. Illick and Clifton Fish; vocal duet, "Juana," Misses Illick and Reetz, with auto-harp accompaniment by the latter; violin solos, "Berceuse" from Jocelyn (Godard), "Salute de Amour" (Elgar), and "Gavotte" (Gossec), Clifton Fish; readings, "Nothing to Laugh at" (Guest) and "The Loose Tooth," Miss Elma E. Haefner; vocal numbers, "Bells of the Sea," and "I Passed By Your Window," H. Douglass LeCompte; solo and duo dance numbers by the Berwick Trio.

DOYLESTOWN BUILDING RECORD

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 5.—Building during the past twelve months

during the past twelve months amounted to approximately $329,000, most of the construction work being new factory and business buildings.

This is a decrease over the previous year.

So far as the year 1930 was concerned in house building activity locally, builders and architects have pronounced it "a flat year." All are of the opinion however that 1931 will see a marked resumption of house building in this borough.

The office of A. Oscar Martin, registered architect, reports that 1930 was the biggest year in the history of that business, but a large percentage of the structures planned by that firm were erected outside of Doylestown, in various sections of Bucks and adjoining counties.

This community's largest building project in 1930 was the new Clymer

WHAT NEXT IN INDIA?

Under a picture of Gandhi, leader of the native uprising in India, on the front cover of a current magazine are the words, "Man of the year." Any doubts as to the accuracy of the phrase were dispelled when the British authorities in India were forced without force to liberate him after a long imprisonment.

This strange man, without show of violence, without a weapon of any sort, has wrung from Great Britain full dominion status for India. What others before him have failed to accomplish by massacres and armed resistance he achieves with passive resistance by a few thousands of faithful, illiterate, docile followers.

By going direct to the seas for their salt as a protest against the government salt tax, by permitting themselves to be trod upon by the soldiery and public, and by going peacefully to jail by the tens of thousands, the Indian nationalists have won independence.

Western civilization will have to revise its opinions of Oriental perversity and impracticalism. It may not know what it wants or whence it is going and it may use strange methods to get there, but it arrives some place and that some place turns out to be where it wants to be.

But now that he has it, what is Gandhi going to do with it? He rebelled, not because of British misrule or to better the condition of his people, but simply because he thinks the British have no right to India. And he knows that if the armed British forces are withdrawn from India the result will be chaos, with the resultant loss of what progress has been made under British rule.

Gandhi was able to persuade the masses in India that the British had wronged them and that British occupancy was the symbol of their spiritual humiliation, but not even this "man of the year" will be able to convince them that they are better off once a native government is again given free rein in exploiting them.

"FOREST LOVE" by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

Becoming cynical at her mother's wish to have her marry for wealth, Nancy Hollenbeck, young and beautiful, accepts the ardent attentions of Jack Beamer, who is married to a wealthy invalid. On a mountain trip, Nancy, after a brief courtship, marries Roger Decatur, a ranger. Sickening of the loneliness, with Roger away, she returns home to resume her old life, still keeping her marriage a secret. When Roger, deeply in love with Nancy, comes to take her back, she tells him untruths he makes his home in the city. He will divorce her, although she realizes her own love for him. She confides in her grandmother who gives her financial aid. After Roger leaves, Nancy continues her clandestine affair with Beamer, whose wife refuses to free him. Louise, Nancy's sister, always second with men, now has a rich, though elderly, suitor. Beamer takes Nancy to his farm on a jaunt. Mrs. Beamer unexpectedly arrives and Nancy is bundled into the kitchen. Beamer decides to placate his wife to protect his own financial welfare. Nancy, though humiliated, forgives him when he phones. At home, Nancy assails her mother for catering to Mr. Lachman, Louise's wealthy admirer. Louise, after attending a sorority luncheon, lingers on, hoping to meet Mat Tully.

CHAPTER XLII

SHE was afraid of being early, so she was almost late. When she neared the Chemistry Building, where he worked, walking slowly, so that it would look casual and not premeditated, she saw him hurrying around the corner.

"Mat—wait—Mat!"

By a miracle he heard her. "Hello, Lou; what are you doing here?"

"Sorority luncheon. I just happened to come this way." She tried to say it easily and naturally, as Nancy would. But how can you be easy and natural when your heart is pounding? How do girls manage to look cool and collected when they're in love? Just looking at him, at his shabby blue suit and crooked tie, made her want to laugh and cry and hug him all at once.

"Hop in!" They had come to his ratty old car, parked in the circle under the trees.

"You're going to drive me home! Oh, Mat—that's fun!"

"Drive you anywhere you say!" He flung his cap on the seat beside her and grinned at her boyishly. One hand dug into his pocket, out came a handful of change. He counted it out loud. "Twenty-five and ten is thirty-five, and fifty—good grief, I've got $1.85. Let's go get a dago dinner! What do you say?"

Riches.

There was some reason why she ought to be home tonight, but Louise couldn't remember just what it was. She ought to telephone and tell mama she wasn't coming. But by the time you've found a telephone booth and got a connection and been scolded from the other end of the wire half the fun is gone, and Lou wanted it all tonight. Every bit of it.

"I'd love to come," she said, and laughed into his dark, smiling eyes. She felt reckless and young and gay. Not part of the family at all. Mat grinned back at her and stepped on the starter. Nothing happened. He stepped again. Still no action. They looked at each other and broke into crazy hysterical laughter.

After he had cranked it and the old car shuddered and jerked and started at last, Mat remembered there wasn't much gas. He scratched his head. "I'm darned if I see how we're going to buy gas and two dinners on $1.85!"

Lou turned out her purse. A powder puff, lipstick, keys and three quarters.

"Great, we're rich!"

And so the adventure began. A decrepit car, a shabby knight, a truant girl. They drove into the hills back of the university. A roundabout way to a dago dinner. . . . The night was quiet and dark. A cool little wind touched them gently, caressingly. The scent of the Spring, the warm, rich smell of growing things rose intoxicatingly from the earth.

They drove—but what does it matter where they drove? Neither Louise nor Mat knew nor cared. They were off the highway, bumping along some rural road. With the facility of long practice Mat drove with one hand. And, without any practice at all, Lou's head came to rest on his shoulder.

Eucalyptus, pungent and graceful, shut out all view of the city. Somewhere below the road a creek tinkled over stones. In the thicket of willow bordering the stream night birds chattered.

"Mat, isn't it— isn't it—heaven?"

"Oh, Lou, you're lovely— lovely!"

Lost.

He bent to kiss her; habit again. Parked car, pretty girl. She lifted her head to meet his kiss. After arms went out to him, sweetly, generously. "Mat. . . my very dear. . . ." And in that moment, with the small night wind blowing his hair and his cheek against hers, Mat Tully knew that the thing he had speculated about, and scoffed at, and never really believed in, had happened to him. He had fallen in love.

"We won't wait any longer," mama said brightly, tremulously. "Something must have delayed Louise. We'll just go ahead."

"An accident?" Mr. Lachman began hopefully. Not that he wanted Louise injured, of course. But a traffic jam. . . . he could drive down and get her. He half rose from his chair.

"Oh, no, I'm sure that any moment—"

And Papa said, "Now don't worry, Oliver; she's probably just forgotten that you were coming. These rattle-brained girls!"

"Forgotten?" . . . forgotten him? Mr. Lachman's dinner was savdust in his mouth. Forgotten him, had she? After all he'd spent already!

"I'm afraid the chicken is just a LITTLE overdone. . . . Peter give Mr. Lachman a little more of the breast," Mrs. Hollenbeck quavered, reminding him that he was out.

He spread a large, mottled hand protectively over his plate. "No! No more for me, thank you. Very delicious!" It really was very good. He'd have liked the wish-bone, still on the platter. And a bit of the crackly brown skin. Why didn't they cook it that way in restaurants? But he had resolved to snub his hostess. He wouldn't have any more.

He refused the cake and coffee, papa's cigar.

"Louise ought to be here any moment now," poor Peter Hollenbeck said again, anxious eyes on the clock.

"Mum," murmured Mr. Lachman, high forehead agitter, long no moist with emotion.

When mama couldn't stand it any longer she crept into the kitchen where Grandma Hollenbeck, scraping dishes, was salvaging chicken bones for the Whaley's cat.

"I hope you're satisfied," she sobbed. "Stirring up trouble between me and my girls. Oh, you needn't talk—I know—I know you put Nancy up to saying what she did about Mr. Lachman. Louise too. . . . I suppose you know where she is?"

The old lady's eyes flashed. Her work-worn hand, red from the dish water, went stealing to her petticoat pocket. . . . the pocket was empty, of course. She had given away her independence, given it to Nancy.

"I'm getting sick of it!" the younger woman shrieked. "I'll have you know this is my house! I won't have any interference with my. . . my. . ."

Her voice trailed off. The front door. Louise! Louise had come in.

"Hello, everybody. . . oh, how do you do, Mr. Lachman? Mat and I went for a ride. . . . papa, you remember Mat Tully? And Mr. Lachman, you've met Mr. Tully, too, I think?"

Mr. Lachman extended a large, clump hand and sank back into his chair exhausted.

Nancy, hearing the commotion, ran downstairs and resumed her seat at the piano. Papa attempted feeble pleasantries. Mama's nervous laughter punctuated her polite conversation. Even Mat was ill at ease. But Lou. . . . Lou was sparkling, aflame with excitement, oblivious of the family, of Mr. Lachman, of everything but Mat.

"And we haven't had a bite to eat—we were going to dinner, and we got lost or something. . . . is that chicken I smell? Come on, Mat; let's go out in the kitchen—grandma is out there. Grandma is the darlingest one in the family, Mat—she'll feed us!"

Mama's hand went to her collar, but she seemed to have lost the power of speech. She couldn't talk. Mr. Lachman rose. He was very pale and little beads of perspiration glistened on his long upper lip.

"Just a moment Miss—Miss Louise," he began, jovially. "You're not going to desert us? After I came all the distance from San Francisco, leaving important business and social duties, to see you?"

"It was very rude of you, my dear," mama cut in nervously, conscious of the crisis in the air and afraid, oh, terribly afraid, that Louise wouldn't rise to the occasion, wouldn't stop chattering to that silly boy and say something charming. . . . and it would have to be very charming. . . . to bring Mr. Lachman back to good nature.

Lou hesitated. Glanced reluctantly kitchenward, and then back to mama and Mr. Lachman. "I'm sorry—if I'd known you were coming, I'd have been here, of course."

Mr. Lachman breathed again. He stuck both hands in his pockets and teetered back and forth on his heels. "Oh, so they forgot to tell you!" His cold, fishy gaze rosted triumphantly upon papa. Aha! Just as I thought! More of your inefficiency! he seemed to say.

Then Lou, conscience-stricken, "Oh, this is THURSDAY. I'd forgotten. Please forgive me, Mr. Lachman!"

Fate.

He'd never forget, but he might forgive her. After all, she was very young and very lovely. While he was groping for just the right words to say, smiling down at her fatuously, she began to laugh, joyously, lightly, the way Nancy used to laugh a year ago.

Between gasps of bubbling, choking laughter, she managed to say, "Wasn't it funny? I didn't just forget Mr. Lachman and the family dinner party. . . . I forgot to have dinner at all! And oh, Mat, I'm so hungry now. . . . Weren't we the idiots? Come on out in the kitchen!"

The door banged behind them. In the sudden strained silence, Nancy's voice rose shrilly: "Isn't love grand?"

Oliver T. Lachman, president of the Parkhurst National Bank, was gone, and all Peter Hollenbeck's hopes had gone with him. He would never be vice-president now. He would never be anything but a clerk. A failure. Lachman would never do anything for him now. Maybe he'd find an excuse to. . . but no, no man would dismiss a faithful employee just because his daughter. . . his daughter.

Papa's round, gray head went down in his hands. He had not realized how much he had counted on Louise. But I wouldn't have let her marry him if she didn't love him, he thought, defending himself and trying to put that last unpleasant picture of a moist and repellent Mr. Lachman sputtering on the doorstep resolutely out of his mind.

It wasn't as if he were counting on it, exactly. "I just thought, well, it would be a great thing for us all if she happened to take to him. And many a young girl would be only too glad to have the opportunity. He'd have made her a wonderful husband. . . . well, it was not to be." He sighed again. His unquiet thoughts ran on, suppose Lachman did get rid of him. . . . what would he do? How could he, at his age, go the rounds of the employment bureaus asking for work, asking his friends, borrowing money? . . . He caught Kitty staring at him, fascinated. He must have shown his thoughts too clearly. "Well, what is to be, will be," he said with forced cheerfulness, trying to sound as if he were reassuring her instead of himself.

All these people have taken Life Tone and all acclaim its power to do them good.
Unlike all other tonics, Life Tone is pleasant-tasting and liked by small children. These little folks need the helpful assistance of Life Tone just as the grown-ups do. Mothers who are now giving their children Life Tone praise it highly because it is not necessary to fight or argue with the children to get them to take it. Most children, after once tasting Life Tone, ask for it again and again. Life Tone's ingredients cause the children to eat heartily and gain weight and strength.

Local People Acclaim the Health-Building Elements of Life Tone—Say It Has Helped Them Regain Health and Strength

Life Tone Is Made From Nature's Own Remedies and Contains Absolutely No Habit-Forming Drugs—You Can Take Life Tone Safely, Whether You Are the Oldest Man or Woman or the Youngest Child

Life Tone is a highly efficient stomach medicine made from roots, herbs, bark, leaves and a few other good things for the nerves, stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels.
It is the medicine of which Mrs. Muriel Irene Henderson says: "It's the only medicine that gave me the enjoyment of eating a hearty meal, a good restful night's sleep, cleared my complexion and put vitality and strength in my blood. Today I am a new woman, full of pep, vim and vigor. I would indeed be selfish if I did not permit you to tell other people my wonderful experiences with Life Tone."
Don't fail to take advantage of the liberal free trial offer made possible by your local druggist. The free trial bottle of Life Tone he has for you will give you ample time to find out that Life Tone contains the things which will help your condition.
You may be starting your blood in the midst of plenty. It isn't how much you eat that counts, but it's how you digest the food you eat. You cannot get steam out of water without fire, and you can't get brain power, nerve force, and red blood corpuscles out of food without digestion.
Thousands lack sufficient vital force and don't know why. They think they need a vacation or a change of scenery, but they don't. It's old indigestion that's doing the dirty work and six days of Life Tone will do more for them than anything else. It's just like running corn through the mill with the rollers too far apart. The corn goes through but the mill doesn't grind.
DON'T THINK YOU MUST HAVE PAIN TO HAVE INDIGESTION
Lack of flesh, too much fat, pimples, blotches, sallow complexion, lack of nerve force, impoverished blood, sleeplessness, headaches, backaches, dizziness, weak brain power, dizzy spells, spots before the eyes, may all be due to faulty digestive process either in the stomach or bowels.
Take Life Tone with your other food for a week and find out how your digestive organs are working. Life Tone helps you greatly, gives you more force, strength and brain power, you may set it down that your liver and bowels were not doing their duty.

Miss Catherine Kerrigan, of Merchantville, says: "No medicine ever did for me what Life Tone did. I can't say enough to give it the praise it deserves. I had a severe indigestion and a nervous feeling. I suffered with terrible headaches. I lost in weight, strength and energy. I have only taken half a bottle of Life Tone and I can truthfully say that I feel one hundred percent better than I did last week."
People of all ages can benefit from Life Tone. Mrs. Henderson, 40 years of age, is right in the prime of middle life. Miss Kerrigan is but 19. Children as young as 2 years old have taken this wonderful remedy and were helped. Now follows a statement from Mrs. Achah Byard, of Bordentown, N. J., who is 98 years of age and received practically a new lease on life from two bottles of Life Tone.

"I had Indigestion, Gastritis, Shortness of Breath," says Mrs. Byard. "I was afflicted with severe kidney trouble, had Rheumatism in the joints and muscles of my hip and thigh, had Headaches, Poor Appetite and was generally run-down. I have taken two bottles of Life Tone so far and already I find I can sleep better, eat better, no longer have indigestion and am relieved of Gastritis. Even the Rheumatism and kidney pains across the back have disappeared and I no longer have headaches. I am healthier now and feel better than I have in years."

Such statements as these are convincing evidence that Life Tone can help you as it has helped others. By all means clip the coupon below and let Life Tone convince you too.

Doylestown Building Record During the Past Year

on South Main street, formerly the Atkinson Building, is being remodeled at a cost of approximately $5,000.

Building activity near Doylestown in 1930 included two new houses on Iron Hill Road, New Britain, erected by Wynne James, Jr., at a cost of $500 apiece. The New Britain school was completed at a cost of $20,000. The Voss Hosiery Mill, the largest nearby project, was completed at a cost of over $150,000 in New Britain borough. A new dairy and laundry building was completed at the Bucks County Home, costing $10,000. A new cottage was erected on the estate of Mrs. Constance E. Gell, Doylestown pike, costing $7,000. A new model barn costing $15,000 was erected on the Mrs. Lorah Wilson farm on the Dublin pike.

In Doylestown extensive improvements were made to the Broad Court Apartments on Broad street by Wynne James.

Another project started in 1930 and about completed is the rebuilding of the Clear Springs Worsted Mill that was destroyed by fire recently. The L. C. Crew farm near Doylestown is undergoing improvements that will cost approximately $5,000.

During this year six new homes will be erected by Wynne James, Jr., in New Britain. They will be constructed by Wilbur Fretz.

L. W. F. Bailey, of West Court street, a member of the firm of John Bailey and Brother, will erect a new dwelling on a lot recently purchased from J. L. Campbell on the Doylestown Country Club tract. In addition there are a number of other residents of Doylestown who are having plans made at the present time for new homes to be erected in town and nearby.

More new school buildings were erected in Bucks county in 1930 than in any previous year in the history of the county, according to A. Oscar Martin, of this borough. New structures or extensive additions and improvements were made in New Britain, Chalfont, Morrisville, Parkland, Upper Southampton, Bristol township, Lower Makefield, Fallsington and Nockamixon townships. Bids were opened last night for a new school building in New Hope.

Building costs have dropped anywhere from 15 to 20 per cent according to Mr. Martin. This is due to a slight decrease in the cost of material but principally due to the reduction of the wage scale. More work is being accomplished by laborers in the building game today than ever before. This is due to the fact that undesirable labor is eliminated if the work is not up to par, and other men are hired. Many are available because of the unemployment situation.

At the present time the Martin architectural offices have under construction an $80,000 home in Gladstone, N. J., a palatial Dutch inn on the concrete highway between Colmar and Lansdale, several homes in Lansdale and a number of new school projects.

"I believe that 1931 will see an increased activity in home building," Mr. Martin said.

Plans are being prepared now for building an addition to the Bucks County Court House which may go through in 1931 as the largest local building project.

Why the Knock?

A Gulf Refining Company official talks about No-Nox Ethyl.

"The manufacturers of motor cars have found that the higher the compression the better the performance. To increase compression the motor builder reduces the size of the combustion chamber. The principle of high compression may be demonstrated with a rubber ball—the harder you throw it to the ground, the higher it bounces; or take the old fashion muzzle loading shot gun, the tighter the powder is tamped the greater the force of the shot. In the motor the tighter the piston squeezes or compresses the charge of fuel before firing, the greater will be the power from the explosion.

And here's where No-Nox Ethyl steps into the breach. The tendency of ordinary gasoline to "knock" limited the compression. By mixing Ethyl compound with No-Nox the knock is stopped, "knocked out."

For many years Charles F. Kittering, president of General Motors Research Laboratories, and his associates endeavored to perfect an anti-knock compound and their labors were finally crowned with success when they found that tetraethyl lead would do the trick.

About one teaspoon of "Ethyl" fluid to one gallon of No-Nox Motor Fuel gives an ideal anti-knock gasoline, which eliminates knocks, gives added power on hills, faster pick-up and a cooler running motor. The reason for this is the fact that "Ethyl" fluid controls the combustion rate of gasoline—keeps it from burning too quickly as the compression is raised.

Your motor was designed to deliver a certain number of revolutions per minute—fuel knocks reduce these revolutions (r.p.m.), the motor becomes sluggish—slows down. With the proper (r.p.m.) revolutions per minute of your motor more power is generated and with it greater mileage with a much less strain on the motor, as well as the car generally.

Vibration in the motor is a deadly enemy to car performance—it is communicated to the frame and thence to the body with the resultant loosening of nuts and bolts. No-Nox Ethyl minimizes vibration and thereby reduces deterioration.

Consistent users of No-Nox Ethyl over a period of a year or more will find the general condition of car and motor to be very satisfactory. Gulf Service Stations are now dispensing

No-Nox Ethyl.

"I might also say," he continued, "that starting is troublesome on cold winter mornings or even when the weather has a pleasant snap. A gasoline of low end point, like No-Nox Ethyl for instance, vaporizes more quickly and completely making starting easy."

able to determine certain vitamins and other factors in various foods. The white rat is an animal that is standardized in the testing of food.

During the past 25 years the Wistar Institute has done more with the white rat than has any other like institution. In studying the nervous system of this species of rat it was necessary to study its other systems also. The work has grown to such an extent in that length of time that the dream of such a farm as the one now under way is realized. This project is rather a new idea in research work, but is not an experimental station. The work will be entirely concerned with scientific aspects of anatomy, nutrition, etc.

There are many baking companies which use the Wistar Institute's white rats for testing of foods. Other companies and laboratories use them for many purposes.

White rats present an interesting as well as an important study, and have proven exceedingly useful to mankind in many respects. It is possible to breed a litter a month, many litters running as high as 18. The life period of such measures about three years, which corresponds to a man's life span of 90 years. Conditions found in a rat of one year may be expected to exist in a man at 30, the workers familiar with these rodents state.

The closest possible inbreeding is carried out at the Wistar laboratories, among the rats. Brothers and sisters have been bred together for 75 generations, the 76th litter making its appearance last week. But in order to carry out such close inbreeding it is necessary to have the best of animals. "This relationship is also possible, good results being assured, in other animals," state those familiar with this phase of endeavor, "providing they are good animals." This is one of the important findings of the Wistar workers who have exploded an age-old theory that inbreeding of brother and sister was not conducive to desirable results. "It all depends upon the condition of the animals involved," these research workers claim, believing that this question has been settled for generations to come.

The two new rat buildings at the Emile farm are most unique. The rats will be placed in rooms, in which there are 40 cages each. These cages are so constructed that the rats may use passageways through the walls to (Continued on Page 6)

Advice to Girls

By NANCY LEE

DEAR NANCY LEE:

You have helped so many other lonesome girls I wonder if you can help me, too. I am not the type that seems to appeal to fellows, although I am considered pretty. Do you think I am too old-fashioned to be in the swing of modern times?

Please tell how I can go out of my way to attract men.

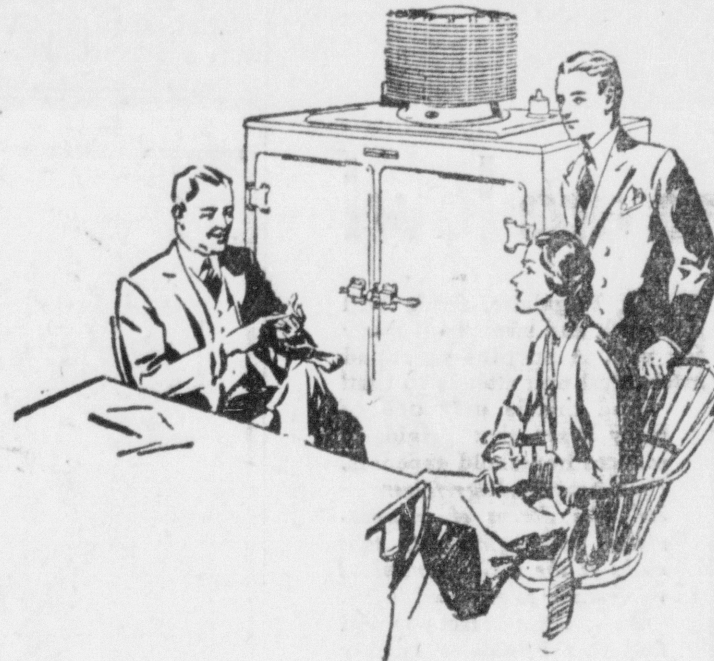

LONELY LILY.

LONELY LILY: Despite jeers and fears, keep your head high and you will not regret having kept your self-respect. Do you belong to the social organizations of a place of worship? There you will find young men who appreciate a decent girl. Or perhaps the business organization to which you belong has a social club. If you are musical or literary or artistic enquire about clubs catering to similar tastes in your community. Tackle your problem bravely and you will find that it will be quickly and easily solved. And another thing, don't parade your likes and dislikes, your approvals and disapprovals. Don't be uncommonly good.

Why Commute?

Why travel back and forth to your employment, which is here in Bristol, when such desirable dwellings are to be obtained here at such reasonable rents? It will pay any individual to investigate!

Work Where You Live and Live Where You Work.

If you are employed in Bristol you should live here. It will be less expensive and there are numerous other advantages derived from making your home in the town where you are employed.

You will save many hours a year which are now spent in traveling and you will have more time with your family.

The saving in money will also be considerable. Add to that which you are now paying for rent the amount which you spend in traveling back and forth to your employment here. You'll be surprised at the total. Rent a house here at a moderate rental and bank the difference.

Houses.

Comfortable dwellings, well situated and at moderate rents are to be found in that portion of Bristol which is immediately adjacent to the P. R. R. passenger station.

These houses make ideal homes and consist of six rooms with bath.

Conveniences.

They are heated by hot-air furnaces with a direct pipe leading to every room. They are lighted with electricity and are equipped with sewer, municipal water and gas.

Each room is well lighted and yet the space devoted to windows is not excessive.

Front porches are another attractive feature as is also a small rear yard where children can play in safety away from the perils of traffic.

Houses such as these would rent for considerably more in any city, where the conveniences would not surpass those offered here.

CY WILLIAMS SEEKS HIS TENTH MANAGER

By Les Conklin
L. N. S. Sports Writer
NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—(Cy) Williams, Notre Dame's most famous tenth manager.

The 43-year-old outfielder, who recently was given his unconditional release by the Phillies, served under Notre Dame to the Chicago Cubs in 1912. Frank Chance and Fred Mitchell were his managers at Chicago. In Philadelphia, he took orders successively from Pat Moran, Jack Coombs, Catus Cravath, Bill Donovan, Irving Wilhelm, Art Fletcher and Burt Shotton.

At the close of the 1930 season, Williams had been playing major league ball for nineteen years, longer than nine big league pilots after going from any other big league then in active service. Eddie Collins has been around longer than Cy, but Eddie went to bat only twice last season.

Williams certainly wound up his career with the Phils in a blaze of glory. Although he appeared in only twenty-one games and was used mainly as a pinch hitter, Cy finished the season with the fat batting average of .471, the highest mark of his career. He had been in the 399 class half a dozen times previously, and hit as much as .345 in 1926.

Williams is free to get another job where he can. He may catch on with a minor league club.

Old Cy broke up many a game at Baker Bowl with a drive over the short right field wall. And in his prime he was a crackjack outfielder, in addition to being a fast man on the bases.

Williams probably was the mildest-mannered player in the big leagues. He was ejected from the park by an umpire only once in his long career, and then by mistake.

Some thirty-odd other old-timers have passed out of the big leagues in the past year. Former stars who were under reserve to major league clubs a year ago and who have now passed out of the picture include the following:

Catchers—Benny Bengough, Bubbles Harrgrave, Hank DeBerry, Johnny Gooch, Mickey O'Neil, Clyde Manion, Bernie Hurling and Earl Smith.
Pitchers—Jack Scott, Johnny Morrison, Jack Quinn, Howard Ehmke, Grover Alexander, Dutch Henry, Owen Carroll, Rube Ehrhardt, Buzz McWeeny, Carmen (Specs) Hill, Bob McGraw and Ken Holloway.

Outfielders—Curt Walker, Ed Roush, Ken Williams, Jimmy Welsh, Ira Flinstead, Johnny Metzler and Bob Meusel.
Infielders—George Sisler, Eddie Moore, Johnny Clancy and George Kelly.

High School Teams Score Two Victories

In the earlier game of the evening the local girls came through with a well rounded victory over the Hathboro sextet. The final whistle found the Cardinal and Gray leading the Hathboro aggregation by the score of 32 to 17.

Although the local girls were the first to break the ice in the early part of the game with the foul shots of DeLissio and Whyatt, thus giving them a two point lead, the visitors immediately tied the score with Bleckschmidt's field goal and forged ahead with the twin-pointers of Weiss. However, the local sextet retaliated and through the double-deckers of Whyatt and DeLissio once more took the lead and continued to hold it to the end of the game.

Whyatt was high scorer for the Cardinal and Gray with twenty-five points to her credit; while Bleckschmidt did the honors for Hathboro.

This coming Friday both squads play Yardsley on the latter's court.

the sunlight should they so desire. In each cage is a small turntable for exercising. Study has shown that a female rat, placed in an exercising cage, will run about 10 miles a night, the record of the male being but half of that. The turntables will be used in the new buildings, rather than the exercising cages. The turntables are used quite frequently by the rodents, and are said to be a great stimulus to fertility, it having been proven that the number in a litter is increased when these are used for exercising.

All of the rats are carefully handled each day by the women workers who study them. Roomy pockets in the large aprons worn by the workers are where the rats are placed when they are transferred from cage to cage.

Elaborate menus are arranged for these strange charges, the menus being changed daily. Much milk and butter are fed to the nursing mothers; while cereals; fruits, both fresh and canned; fish; liver, meats, tomatoes, grains, eggs, are fed to the others.

Great care is exercised in connection with the bedding, food, and other needs of the animals, all of which are sterilized. After such things are put through a steam sterilizer, which helps to guard against infection, they are placed in a sealed room. The only means of entrance to this room is one door, and after removal of portions of the needed foods, etc., the door is again sealed with vaseline. Watering devices in each cage are so arranged that there is no possible chance of contamination of the water supply. It is planned to place apparatus at the farm for canning of tomatoes, these to be used in the animals' menu.

Heat for the buildings is received in an indirect manner, the air being blown into the basement, dust there being blown out, and the warm fresh air sent upstairs. All the new buildings are practically fire-proof.

Rats are not the only animals that will be given much attention at the new Wistar farm. Some frogs and turtles will there be located for study, as well as 'possums. The possums are used in this phase of endeavor because of their immature station at birth. The opossum is the lowest form of mammal in this country. Frogs will be propagated at the side of one of the large natural ponds on the estate.

It has been found possible to transplant body members from one animal to another. Frequently a leg from one is grafted onto another animal of this group, an arm or other portion of the anatomy transplanted with ready success. Work of this nature is proving to have many practical aspects.

There are no students connected with the Wistar Institute. The insti-

The Boy Who Dwelt In a World Apart

—Dull and Sullen Others Thought Him

But What Did They Know About That Dream Place of His Where He Was the All-Conquering Hero —the Awakening Was Tragic.

By WINIFRED BLACK.

THE boy killed himself the other day. Nice fellow—gentle, impulsive, warm hearted, romantic, good natured.

Clever too, in a kind of dreamy, far-away fashion. Swam well, a good hiker, not a very successful worker. Head too full of dreams for that—just yet a dreamer—that boy.

Making heroes of people and trying to act like his heroes, falling in love with beautiful ladies, from afar.

Worshipping at the shrine of some little movie actress who would laugh at the very thought of him. Making up his mind to go into the Secret Service, and he another romantic adventurer like Lawrence the Englishman, or like some of the great explorers who died gloriously of cold and hunger far up in the frozen north.

The Hero Falls In Love They thought he was sullen at some and at school they sometimes thought he was dull—but dear me, how could he be interested in who ordered Rome way back yonder in Notium, or what the dog did to the point on the front door with his muddy paw? He had no time to think about little things like that.

He was a Great Hero and he wanted to be thinking about airships and submarines, and supplies, and what he would gain when he flew way off somewhere and discovered a new country, and then flew home again and landed right in the school yard where his stupid old teachers, who made such a fuss over nothing, would see him and think, "Well, William has turned out to be quite a man after all."

He was a little short in the answer he made his Mother when she called him out of the window seat and sent him downstairs to get kindling for the fireplace, but who wouldn't be short to be called down from the peak of a tall ship just when he was ordering the Pirate Captain into rons—just to do some little ordinary nothing of a job that any poor, feeble old man could do just as easily as not.

Then all at once the boy fell in love. He knew the girl all his life, and he had never liked her. She called him a "Smarty," and he drew pictures of her on the blackboard at noon, pictures of a snub nose and feet that were really a leetle too big. And she "told teacher," and Teacher kept him after school and asked him if he thought that was the way for a gentleman to act.

And the boy hated the girl worse and worse, and then all of a sudden one day when they were all skating on the pond back of the school house, something happened to one of the girl's skates and she fell to the ice. Everybody crowded around and the boy came and helped her up, and from that minute he was crazy about her.

Your Own Reaction Maybe her nose was a little bit tilted—but, oh, what eyes, and what a smile and the way she said "Billie!"... It melted the heart in his breast to hear it.

And he lived for the girl, he wrote her letters and tore them up; he said things at home that made his mother mention the girl's name, and when his cousin laughed and yelled, "Look! Billie blush—she's as red as a beet!" he wanted to kill that cousin, and bury him in the swamp, and forget about him.

And the girl liked the boy too. She didn't say anything about it, but the boy knew how she felt. So he got a job delivering parcels after school so as to earn money to buy the girl a Christmas present and Valentine and things.

And the girl smiled at him in school and he walked home with her and carried her books and he knew that there was no such girl anywhere in the world as that particular girl. She walked in a kind of silver radiance, like an Angel in a picture, her voice was silver too, and her laugh was like the rippling of a silvery stream.

He studied and he worked as he never studied and worked before—all for The Girl.

An Inspiration And then when he was walking on a ladder of moonbeams straight to the skies a new boy came to town and the girl went skating with the new boy and she let him carry her books home from school. And when Valentine's Day came she laughed at the Valentine her Old Friend sent her and took another Valentine and pinned it in the front of her little blue dress, and when she walked it was as if she heard music somewhere and was dancing to it.

The boy knew what that meant—he walked that way himself—so that night he went home and shot himself.

Does this foolish story make you laugh or do you want to cry just a little? Be careful how you answer for what you say will tell a story all about yourself.

of the institute. The first was after the securing of a charter in 1903, when the institute was moved to a new building across from the medical buildings of the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia.

At the new plant there will be ten workers throughout the entire year, this number being added to in the summer when additional ones will be located at the club-house.

From the Emile farm milk is now sent to the institute's buildings in the Quaker city, where there are 8,000 of the white rats at all times. Fresh vegetables are also shipped to that point in the summer.
